

Irish Setter Club San Diego

IRISH DOGS ARE MANY

Ireland is known for its broad range of cultural heritage but for us at tails.com, our favourite thing about the Emerald Isle is its variety of dog breeds. The Irish word for dog is ‘madra’ and here are the 9 madraí that call Ireland their home.

Name: Irish Red and White Setter
Known for: Friendly attitude and determination
Originally bred as: Gun dogs
Did You Know:

Despite not being recognised by the American Kennel Club until 2009, the Red and White Setter is the older of the two Irish setters. The breed almost became extinct but survived thanks to the efforts of an early 20th-century Irish clergyman, and the breed’s planned revival began in 1970. A keen, intelligent and aristocratic breed, the Red and White Setter makes a loyal and reliable companion.

Meeting Notice

San Diego.

Board Mtgs at 7 p.m.,
followed by a General
Membership Meeting

Next Meetings are
September 11 and October 9
2019
at
Allied Gardens Rec Center

Name: Kerry Blue Terrier (Irish Blue Terrier)
Known for: Their ability to be an all-round farm dog and family dog
Originally bred as: Catchers of rats and other farm vermin
Did You Know:

A romantic Irish story speaks of a blue dog found swimming ashore from a shipwreck that mated with all the female Wheaten Terriers in Kerry, thus producing the Kerry Blue. Kerry Blue Terriers are born black, and gradually start to appear blue as they grow older. Their coats do not shed, but grow throughout the year, meaning that regular hair appointments are needed!

Hello Club Members,

It happens every September the end of Summer and the beginning of Fall.

Hope you all enjoyed your summer.

Volunteers are always needed to make the club a success. Please contact a board member if you can help with our upcoming Playday, Christmas Dinner, Specialty Show in 2020. The club is also looking for a Secretary and volunteers for the board or any officer’s position. Contact any club board member for addition information.

AND MANY MORE

Name: Glen of Imaal Terrier

Known for: Its ability to withstand hard farm work

Originally bred as: General-purpose farm dogs for herding and family companionship and to control vermin

Did You Know:

The Glen of Imaal Terrier had to evolve through generations of hard work to become the sturdy dog we know today, due to the local farmers' need for a strong dog to help manage harsh terrain during the 16th and 17th centuries. In modern times, they display typical terrier traits and harbour deep affection and high enthusiasm for their families.

Name: Soft Coated Wheaten Terrier

Known for: Their playful personalities

Originally bred as: All-purpose farm dogs

Did You Know:

Often known as the "Poor Man's Wolfhound" in Ireland, the Soft Coated Wheaten Terrier shares ancestry with the Kerry Blue Terrier and the Irish Terrier. These dogs have a single coat which sheds very little hair, meaning that they can be easily tolerated by people who are allergic to dog hair. The Soft Coated Wheaten Terrier is an energetic and playful dog with high intelligence and a headstrong terrier nature.

Name: Irish Terrier

Known for: Being one of the oldest terrier breeds

Originally bred as: Vermin control

Did You Know:

The Irish Terrier is a remarkably loyal and good-tempered companion to their family, but if under threat, will respond with courageous determination. The Irish Terrier is easily trained and a loyal, gentle pet who lives up to an Irish writer's description of them as "the poor man's sentinel, the farmer's friend and the gentleman's favourite."

Name: Irish Water Spaniel

Known for: Its waterproof coat and rat-like tail

Originally bred as: Retriever of waterfowl

Did You Know:

It's thought that the Irish Water Spaniel evolved from dogs who originated in Persia, and journeyed to Ireland via Spain. Irish Water Spaniels have a mop of long, loose curls on top of their head, a 'beard' and a curly coat. In Irish folklore, the breed is believed to be the descendant of the Dobhar-chú, a mythical creature said to resemble both a dog and an otter.

AN STILL MORE

Name: Irish Wolfhound

Known for: Being the tallest dog breed in the world

Originally bred as: Hunters of wolves and deer

Did You Know:

Written accounts of the Irish Wolfhound date back to 391 A.D. During the 15th Century, each county in Ireland was required to keep 24 wolfhounds to protect the farmers' flocks from wolves. After the gradual disappearance of the wolf, their numbers were reduced to near extinction by the end of the 17th century, but were revived in the late 19th century due to the growth of Irish nationalism and the breed's association as a symbol of Irish culture and Celtic history.

Name: Kerry Beagle

Known for: Being one of Ireland's oldest breeds of dog

Originally bred as: Stag hounds

Did You Know:

According to local Irish legend, when Noah's Ark arrived at Galtymore, the highest peak in Tipperary, the two black and tan hounds on board (thought to be the Kerry Beagle), smelled a fox and jumped off the ark to pursue it, never to be seen again. The Kerry Beagle doesn't follow the Beagle characteristics recognised by the Kennel Club, but its 'Beagle' name instead is thought to derive from the Irish word 'beag', meaning small.
